Welcome to Dresden!

General information

During the Sino-German symposium “The Yunnan Biodiversity Hotspot – its history and future threats” held in Kunming, PR China, August 05 – 09, 2015 the participants set up a preliminary outline and scientific content for the joined multidisciplinary “The Yunnan Biodiversity Hotspot Project”. Under the leadership of Volker Mosbrugger (Senckenberg) and Zhou Zhe-Kun (XTBG) scientific core questions and core topics were designated as well as working groups and head persons were established. In a strategy paper next working steps towards a full application at the German and Chinese National Science Foundations, respectively (DFG and NSFC) were outlined. One of these steps, a following up meeting to be held in Dresden, Germany in spring 2016, will bring together again the project community and will summarize recent activities of the working groups. The major objective is to discuss the outline and content of the preproposal which has to be submitted to the national science foundations in summer 2016.

On behalf of the project-co-ordinators and the organizing committee you are invited to attend the following up meeting “The Yunnan Biodiversity Hotspot Project – program, objectives, and application” in Dresden, Germany, April 02-06, 2016.
